1965

The world is full of critics.
They fight no fights . . .
They play no ball . . .
They make no mistakes
because they attempt nothing.
Down in the arena
are the doers.
They make mistakes . . .
Because they attempt many things.

BUSINESS

Without sound business management the yearbook could not exist. Jerry Tillett and Donna Kauffman did a splendid job with the monetary affairs this year. They were amenable, not only for the management, but also for the appropriatness of the advertising on each page.

The great talent displayed on the division pages of this yearbook was the result of the ingenuity of our art editors, Marjean Lesher and Kathy McGrew. They not only did the art work but were also lifesavers as pinch hitters.

ART

TYPISTS

The typing of the text of the various pages of the yearbook is the final step before sending the pages to the printing company. This job takes a great deal of knowledge in the fundamentals of grammar, spelling, and also typing. Mary Bonhomme and Bobbie Kleeman filled the job of typists with initiative and precision.

COPY

One of the most important groups on this year's staff is the copy editors. The job of the copy editors is to write descriptions and outlines of the various organizations, social activities, and sports events. They also think up the many witty captions for the pictures. Vicki Martin, Joe Barr, and Barrie Brandt, whose helpful earnestness and energy were complete assets to this year's publication, were this year's copy editors.

CLASS

Each yearbook has people who co-ordinate the layout of pictures of the various clubs and organizations. These are the social editors, D. D. Burrough and Barb Parish. Their job is one of the most important of the staff, and they serve a valuable service to the co-editors and sponsors.

Jim Conn and Dave Martin were selected as this year's sports editors. It was their responsibility to select the settings and positions for the pictures of the various teams. Their efforts contributed to the over-all success of the yearbook.

SOCIAL

SPORTS

ADS

The basic foundation of the success or failure of a yearbook depends primarily upon the initiative and determination of the sales and ads committees. This year these committees broke all records in the selling of ads and yearbooks for the class of '65. One can truly say that their ambition was the guiding light for a successful senior year. Kids, a job well done! May you do as well in real life.

ACADEMIC

There must be individuals who are willing to sacrifice time and energy to prepare us for this world of complexities. No matter what position these patient individuals hold in life, they are indispensable in molding and creating the citizens of tomorrow. Although they may not always receive public recognition, this does not mean their efforts go unappreciated.

Harold Wilson, Harrison, Treas., Harold Roller, Jefferson, V. Pres., Howard Goodrich, Boone, Asst. Sec., Mr. Ralph Kelly, Superintendent, Roger Ide, Nobel, Pres., Don Heiny, Cass, Secretary.

ADMINISTRATION

The Board of School Trustees serves the educational interests of the five townships in our school community. It has constantly strived to promote the educational goals necessary for a successful school program. The support given by the people of Pioneer School District has encouraged the School Board to achieve greater heights in its endeavor to provide the educational opportunities necessary for the future growth of its citizens. The educational interest shown by the people in our school community has been responsible for the marked progress in the development of future physical facilities necessary for the continued growth of this school system. It has been a pleasure to serve as Superintendent of Pioneer Regional Schools.

The growth of any successful educational institution depends on realistic imagination, inspired creation, and plausible appreciation. In order to attain these objectives, it takes cooperation and the combined efforts of many people provided with able leadership. Pioneer High School emphasizes the importance of ideals and vitalizes the need to encourage the belief that worthwhile activities are received mostly through sacrifice and concentrated effort. The aim of the program is to establish simplicity and honesty and to develop pride in workmanship. Each student is encouraged to develop a will to win or excel without boastfulness based on the predication that people are happier when they believe in something greater than they themselves. Society is stronger when fortified by love, courage, service, and intellectual leadership.

Efficiency is a very important part of any business organization, and a school corporation is no exception. The very heart and backbone of this efficiency is the secretary. She toils each day, from completing essential records to handling minor complications which arise, from misplaced coats to a serious illness. Yet with all the frustrations that are crammed into her daily routine, she manages to maintain a helpful attitude and a cheerful smile.

MRS. RAMONA KEY The light of her life.

A definition of faculty is "power, authority, or perogative given or conferred." And how does this pertain to "the body of persons to whom are entrusted the government and instruction as (the teachers of a high school)?" Any large body which entails such a great number of people, as does a high school, needs a governing force. This group of intelligent, self-sacrificing, industrious people establish the procedure by which each school day is run.

The faculty is much more than an assemblage of babysitters, standing over a group of immature adolescents. They work as a whole to teach us the principles of good citizenship. If it were not for the teachers who are willing to devote their life to imparting their knowledge to others, we would not have the highly educated men to lead our society. The importance of this education is illustrated by the fact that the 19th century education was not stressed as it is now. Abraham Lincoln obtained his education by himself, but it took many years of hard work and personal initiative. By today's standards Abraham Lincoln's education would not be sufficient for him to be the great leader he was. Just as the requirements for being President have changed, so has the need for an education become greater. As civilization progresses, the need for a more extensive and liberal education becomes greater, and thus the need for more and better teachers.

The faculty, often unthanked, remain and will remain the controlling force in the lives of every human being. The advice and guidance given by these people is often overlooked, but never unappreciated.

After the hectic days as a freshman end, the student becomes more a part of the school routine. The sophomore, as clumsy and awkward as he may seem to be, is now beginning to "grow up." FRESHMEN

Definition of a freshman: small, dependent, and bewildered. The first year of school is the most difficult. The freshman must learn new things, work harder than he ever has before, and, most of all, conform. But the freshman year is much more than conforming and beating out one's brains for a grade. There are many more activities involved in high school than in grade school. The freshman becomes involved in many of these extra-curricular activities. Each freshman has a certain job to do and through combined effort it becomes pleasure in the form of plays, parties, and other activities and doing these jobs becomes more a part of the school itself and develops a personality of his own.

ACTIVITIES

Throughout the year many activities are interspersed with the concentration of homework. Such activities are not designed to take precedence over the studies, but are designed to be a supplement to the learning process. The student's accomplishment in the various activities gives a basic understanding of what he must do to succeed in everyday life.

The Sunshine Society has adopted a fifteen-year-old orphan from Korea named Rim Soon Ock, who lives at the Soo Yang Children's Home. Several of the girls send her letters which are translated by the orphanage. She sends the girls letters and cards which she creates herself. Not only has she been helped by the Sunshiners, but also she has taught them some of the customs of her country and life. The main goal of the Sunshine Society is to help others. Candy is sold each year to finance such activities as helping to support the Korean orphan, donating to the Riley Fund, and entertaining the patients at the State Hospital during the Christmas season. They also do little things for the community, such as Daddy Date Night, Mother and Daughter Banquet, and the tea for the Ideal Ladies. The big event of the year is the Sweethearts' Ball. It is an exclusive dance for Sunshine girls and their escorts. This year's theme was the Stork Club.

CHORUS

The moods of the students are illustrated and sometimes set by the wide variety of music which is produced by the musical department. All types of music are heard--from the fast and excited tempos expressed by rock and roll, to the slow and pensive tempos, which are expressed by the beat of the blues. The opportunity and enjoyment are unlimited in the field of music. The bands give the students a wide variety of fields from which to choose and learn. The Nut Band and Swing Band can provide an opening to let out inner feelings of excitement, while the Regular Band provides an opening to release emotion of the more serious note. The chorus provides an opportunity for its members to use their voices to their fullest capabilities and learn the great enjoyment that can be obtained in singing. By expressing their emotions in music, they supplement that part of their education which cannot be obtained from books.

In 1889 at Chapman, Kansas, a group of boys with spare time met with David F. Shirk, a teacher they admired. The result was the formation of a Bible Study group which later turned for leadership to the Young Men's Christian Association. Membership is open to all high school boys. In joining Hi-Y the boys also become members of the YMCA.

They have replaced the formal Bible study with an opening and closing prayer. Most of the boys participate in the Hi-Y basketball games. They direct traffic and park cars at the high school's games and sell Christmas trees. The final event of the Hi-Y year is the Spring dance.

It is the good sportsmanship exhibited by the pep club that projects the image of Pioneer upon those who come in contact with them. It is not only a winning basketball team that makes a winning school, but also the enthusiasm of the student body. It has been said that the spirit of the pep club has made the difference between a win and a loss.

STUDENT COUNCIL

OFFICERS

The most important elected governing body in the school is the Student Council. They express the views and present the wishes of the students. Sock hops, the Christmas Dance, and other activities which they sponsor provide a needed diversion from school work. The Student Council is composed of the finest students in the school and represents the zenith of student achievement.

LIBRARIANS

A very important part of a student's scholastic duties are made easier by the invaluable assistance of the librarians. The librarians not only provide the student a helpful service but also, because of the rising demand for trained personnel, obtain valuable experience for a future job after school. The librarians, under the supervision of Mrs. Key, provide a great service to the students.

The projectionists entertain the student body with interesting and educational films. While showing these movies, they not only do the school a service, but they also learn the mechanics of such machines as the projector. The experience gained from running the machines and the additional knowledge obtained from the films themselves provide a good background of various subjects.
